FOREWORD.

The first exhibition of a new art society, especially of a society with aims different to, and larger than, those of kindred existing institutions, may call for a few explanatory words to avoid misunderstandings. The Allied Artists' Association was formed early this year with the primary object of permitting artists to submit their work freely to the judgment of the public. Mr. Arthur Ransome, in the course of an article on the Assocontinue in the Fortnightly Review, has pointed out that "in the ordinary exhibitions, like the Academy, there is a jury whose tavourable opinion must be obtained by the artist before he is allowed to make his bow. The jury is invariably chosen not from peoplytes, but from men of some reputation and standing in their ort; that is to say, in most cases, from men of an earlier generation than that of the youngest artists who may wish to exhibit. It is at least to be hoped that these young men have other ideals than those of their fathers. . . . But if the artist choose to dress in clothes a little out of the fashion, if he choose to experiment in a technique a little removed from the one Deserved for his father, he runs a risk of being howled down Jefore he has had a hearing. Work that is inherently bad may be redused by a jury (it often is not); but work that is inherently new rups a similar risk. It is a question whether it is not worth while to admit the bad in order to have also a chance of examining the new."

For a quarter of a century this question has been answered in the affirmative by the Societé des Artistes Indépendents, of Paris. This exhibition puts the question for the first time to the Fuglish public. The Association accords the same treatment of all artists, irrespective of their positions and reputations. No artist who has made his application to exhibit before the first day of June has been refused. Each exhibitor has the right to exhibit works, not exceeding five in number, without submitting them to any selecting jury. The members have elected forty of the provinces to act as a hanging committee, and to obviate any

"a" Unless notice to the contrary is given in writing, the Exhibition will close on Saturday, August 8th. In accordance with Rule 19 (Rules of Exhibition, 1908), all galidits must be withdrawn on August 12th and 13th, between the hours of 9 a.m. and 6 p.m. After this date (August 13th) all remaining works will cease to be in charge of the Association, and will be handed over to Mesara. Dicksee & Co., 7, Duke Street, St. James's, S.W., to be warehoused by them. All "activates of warehousing, carriage, etc., will be at the 11 capture of the owners.

A NOTE ON MODERN RUSSIAN ART.

The exhibition of modern Russian art at the Royal Albert Hall presents a special character to which the attention of the visitors should be drawn.

For the first time in England appears a clan of Russian artists wishing to advance national art in alliance with the traditions of the past.

Titles are often wrong, but if it was necessary to affix one to this exhibition, we could say: Here is a group of artistic nationalists who draw their inspirations pure from Russian life-landscape, people, Russia's historical past, and ancient Russia art.

Princess Marie Tenicheff figures amongst the exhibitors in a double sense, as an artist and as a protector of art. She exhibits her enamels (champleres) bearing the stamp of her personal and at the same time she shows to the London public works her country's School of Art at Talashkino (Government Smolensk); works in carved wood, and, above all, a brautit collection of embroideries, produced by the skilful hands of the little peasant women of Smolensk. The designs of these elbroideries are a revival of the popular decorative art of the fourteenth, fifteenth, and sixteenth centuries.

Painting is represented by Mr. N. K. Roerich (Director of the Imperial School of Art at St. Petersburg) and Mr. Bilibine.

Roerich's work is an avocation of the ancient world and or prehistoric, pagan Russia. Mr. Bilibine is a genial illustrator of fairy tale and legend, which are so rich and powerful in Russia.

A talented sculptor, Baron Rausch von Traubenberg, and two eminent architects, Mr. Wladimir Pokrowsky and Mr. Alexis Schtchoussew, complete the list of exhibitors. And this small group, detached from the phalanx of artists who, in their far-off country, essay to revive ancient Russian art, gives the lie to the erroneous opinion that Russian art is merely an imitation borrow from other countries; an opinion which, unfortunately is widery spread by certain Russian artists, who grouped under a cosmopolitan banner would wish to deny the evident fact that ever the morrow of Russian dawns a bright and powerful sun of Russian National art.

The Treasure of Angels.

For

FOR

In the twelfth heaven are pure Angelic Cities. They are mind by spiritual powers. Angels gather there in seried numbers. Beyond the walls, in the broad valley, is heard the sound of transpets.

All is quiet, both good and evil. Beyond the valley beyond the undolating mountains and the trees of being, lies the Angels treesare. The premons stone in which is good and evil. The story of creation is pictured on that stone, and on that atoms rests the whole world.

The earthly firmament represes on that stone. Assurancels keep the greatest watch over that stone Although exhausted, they still keep watch with threatening spears. They guard that stone from the evil passer-by that good and evil should not be adparated; that the surpent should not devous the formented our

All the vities are held together by the treasure, and without the treasure stone the Angels would disappear.
